How to transform a city: one house and one heart at a time!

What started as a single home improvement project wound up becoming a major transformation of an entire neighborhood—without any major funding or government subsidy. Jacqueline Butler, the wife of a federal judge in Mobile, Alabama, felt that God sent her on a mission to make a difference in the community.

Working with Pastor Ruby Elderidge, members of Pure Word Church, and residents of the neighborhood, they have seen homes completely renovated, redecorated, and restored.

All of this was accomplished with the involvement of nearby residents and tradespeople, much elbow grease, many trips to local secondhand stores, and a big vision for what each home and the neighborhood could become. Jacque and Ruby found that God was there every time, providing what was needed every day in so many amazing ways.

However, God's plan for the neighborhood was not only to see houses rejuvenated but also the lives of the workers and the recipients as well. Jacque shares, "I believe God has shown me that the heavenly blueprint of 'not by might, nor by power, but by my Spirit,' is the key to restoring lives, families, homes, neighborhoods, and cities." Makeovers of the 'Hood is a re-development model that any community can emulate!

Jacque Butler lives in Mobile, Alabama, with her husband, Randy, who is a federal judge. They have two sons, Randy III and Warren. Jacque has been restoring homes for the poor for twenty years. She also started a jail ministry for women at the Mobile Metro Jail six years ago and mentors four children from a broken family. Jacque works closely with Pastor Ruby Eldridge of Pure Word Ministries Church in a disadvantaged area of Mobile County.
