J.J. McCrae is heartbroken. Though he comes from one of the most deadly families in America it was not enough to save his first great love. Another highly skilled and infinitely more ruthless man took J.J.'s wife and brutally murdered her on a cold mountain pass. He wanted revenge. He got it. It wasn't enough. McCrae, along with the help of his family, began a worldwide search for the killer. That man hid in the shadowy recesses of the earth, in Asia, Africa, South America, and the Near East. The man proved elusive. Year pass, and now J.J. is settled in Portland, Oregon, struggling to get on with his life. He has used his very specialized set of skills as a former operator in the army's Delta Force to open up a small, two-man detective agency with his brother Matthew, a former member of SEAL Team Six. But the heart heals slowly. The past yet echoes in J.J.'s life. He remembers his first great love often-her blue eyes, her blond hair, that English accent. And that man was finished. He'd demonstrated even more patience than when he'd been the sniper in J.J.'s counterterrorist troop. He still blames J.J. for what happened during their last operation in Sierra Leone during Operation Barras. And he was out to get him. Again. The wait is over. The time has come. Proper sight picture, make adjustments, inhale, hold it and shoot between heartbeats. He takes the shot. It echoes...like the past.
