An Athlete's Social Media is an extra level of interviewing for college coaches and a connection for your High School sport's fans. Social media can do irreparable damage to a high school athlete's chances of playing at the next level, being accepted into a college, or maintaining their high school athletic status. Social Media can also help you gain the attention of college sport's coaches and promote yourself. Unlike a competition, whether your social media helps or hurts you is completely within your control.
